

WORDS & PICS: CAPTAIN SMURF

CREATURE'S 4TH ANY SPARE CHANGE RALLY

This year was Creature's fourth rally and my first chance to get to an Any Spare Change, even though I egged him on for the first one and volunteered Wozwolf RC to help him out.

Slapped Arse and his performance certainly was lively, Ruff Daddy and Bad Mutha gave a very interesting presentation on how to live a certain branded lifestyle, and Greg Cook finished the show in his hilariously deadpan way.

I WAS IMPRESSED BY THE 50CC MONKEY CUSTOMISED BY SIXTEEN YEAR OLD LEWIS, WHO ALSO RODE IT THE 106 MILES FROM LOWESTOFT

By time I got out of the comedy club the custom show had filled up nicely. There were one or two nice machines on display and I was impressed by the 50cc Monkey customised by sixteen year old Lewis, who also rode it the 106 miles from Lowestoft. He plans to put the 125 engine back in when he's old enough.

presented a cheque to Rick Hulse, Chairman of the NABD, for ... umm ... loads of money - unfortunately I've lost the figures.

My first Any Spare Change Rally was all I'd hoped it would be and more - great atmosphere and good company backed up by great music - good food and drink - and in the process we raised a good amount for NABD too. I would tell you how much, but that's a secret until next year as Rick likes it when Creature surprises him ... ☘

Friday saw a steady stream of arrivals at the event field behind The Plough at Farcet Fen, which went on until quite late and carried on through Saturday too. The first band of the weekend was due to be The Mick Rutherford Band but had to pull out due to unavoidable circumstances, and Jester stood in for them at fairly late notice and got Friday evening off to a cracking start. The Almaboobies rounded off Friday night's bands in their own inimitable style, and then we were joined by Rick Hulse and the Comedy Club who, having finished a performance at the BMF Rally, came straight over to us for a party. The Chaos Roadshow played on (and Paul stayed awake).

Saturday was another sunny day and people started bringing their bikes and trikes over for the custom show whilst we eagerly awaited the Comedy Club. Shortly before it started I thought I should introduce the sponsor, Peter Lane, to Ruff Daddy - if you've seen the Ruff Daddy performance this year you'll understand why I introduced Harley-riding Pete to the men behind the puppets. Dave Twentyman was the opener for this comedy session and his polished act got us warmed up nicely. Richard Massara was a newcomer to the
